

Julie Ballington is the Manager of the Gender and Political Participation Project at the International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance (International IDEA) based in Stockholm, Sweden. Prior to joining International IDEA in 2001, she was a researcher and Gender and Elections Project Manager at the Electoral Institute of Southern Africa (EISA), based in Johannesburg, South Africa. She has written widely on issues relating to the political representation and participation of women, voter turnout and electoral politics. She is currently completing a Ph.D. on the participation and representation of women in South African elections since democratization in 1994.

Peter Ferdinand is Director of the Centre for Studies in Democratisation and Acting Chair of the Department of Politics and International Studies, Warwick University, UK. He was previously Head of the AsiaPacific Programme at the Royal Institute of International Affairs (Chatham House), London. He holds a BA and DPhil from Oxford University and an M.Sc. (Econ) from the LSE. He has also studied or done research at Kiev and Harvard universities and at the Academy of Social Sciences, Beijing. He has written extensively on politics, political economy, democratization and international relations in the Asia-Pacific region, the former Soviet Union and the former Yugoslavia. He is the editor of The Internet, Democracy and Democratisation and he contributed a paper on the Internet and democracy to a workshop at the annual conference of International IDEA in summer 2001.

Karen Fogg is the Secretary-General of International IDEA. Prior to joining IDEA in August 2002, she served as the EU Commission's ambassador to Turkey and to Romania before that. She has worked generally on EU enlargement, financial cooperation and democracy support and analysis since late 1999. She has also worked in EU development cooperation in Central Africa and on food security issues. Joining the EU Commission in 1973, she first worked on employment, social policy and education and has long experience of engaging civil society in policy reform and transnational activity. She studied in Bristol, Bruges and Manchester, focussing on European integration and East-West relations.

Patrick Molutsi is the Manager of the Political Participation and the Democracy Assessment Methodology Programmes at International IDEA. He has a B.A. from the University of Botswana, a Post-Graduate Diploma in Population Studies from the University of Ghana, and an M.Phil. and Ph.D. in Sociology from the University of Oxford, UK. From 1996 to 1999 he was Dean of the Faculty of Social Science at the University of Botswana, and before joining IDEA he was Senior Research Fellow at the Southern African Regional Institute for Policy Studies/Southern African Political Economy Series (SARIPS/SAPES), responsible for a regional report on Governance and Human Development in Southern Africa. He has written and consulted widely on democracy, civil society, governance and political party issues in Botswana and Southern Africa.

Karl-Heinz Nassmacher is a Professor of Political Science at the Carl von Ossietzky University of Oldenburg, Germany, and the Director of its Institute of Comparative Politics. His professional memberships include the Presidential Commission on Party Financing in Germany (1995–1999), the American Political Science Association (life member) and the International Political Science Association (IPSA), where he is a member of the board of the Research Committee on Political Finance and Political Corruption. He has published widely on political finance and corruption in numerous national and international books and journals, given presentations at conferences in all parts of the world, and done extensive field research in Austria, the United Kingdom, Canada, Italy and Sweden.

Yaw Saffu is Head of Governance Programs at the Institute of Economic Affairs (Ghana), a Public Policy Research, Advocacy and Facilitation Institute. He was in academia for 30 years, teaching and writing on political science subjects in three Commonwealth universities – the University of Ghana; the University of Ibadan, Nigeria; and the University of Papua New Guinea. He has held visiting appointments at St Antony's College, University of Oxford; Melbourne University, Australia and the Australian National University in Canberra. For three years, prior to joining the Institute of Economic Affairs in February 2002, Professor Saffu ran a political management consultancy. He holds a B.A. (Hons, Class I) degree from the University of Ghana, and a B.Phil. and a D.Phil. from the University of Oxford.

Maja Tjernström is the Manager of the Political Parties Project at International IDEA. She holds an undergraduate degree in Political Science and Latin American studies from Universidad Complutense in Spain, Göteborg University and Umeå University in Sweden, and a European Master's Degree in Humanitarian Assistance from Ruhr-Universität Bochum in Germany and Uppsala University in Sweden. She has been the Chair of the Umeå Association of Foreign Affairs, worked at polling stations during the elections in Sweden, observed elections abroad, and written on issues related to election management and political finance.

Marcin Walecki is the Political Finance Adviser at the International Foundation for Election Systems (IFES) and he holds a DPhil from St Antony's College, University of Oxford. Before that he was the Senior Program Officer for the National Democratic Institute (NDI) in Ukraine in 2000–2001 and the Campaign Finance Expert for IFES. He is the editor of Funding Politics (Finansowanie polityki), Warsaw 2000; co-author of a number of publications on political finance in Poland and other post-communist countries; and a board member of the IPSA Research Committee on Political Finance and Political Corruption.

Daniel Zovatto Garetto is the Regional Representative for Latin America at International IDEA. From 1986 to 1996 he was the Executive Director of the Center for Electoral Promotion and Assistance (CAPEL), Specialized Center of the Inter-American Institute of Human Rights, in Costa Rica. He graduated from the National University of Cordoba, Argentina, and holds post-graduate degrees in International Studies, Human Rights and Public Administration. He also holds a Ph.D. in International Law from Universidad Complutense, Spain. He has been a visiting professor at several universities all over the world, frequently contributes articles to many Latin American newspapers and political science journals, and is an international consultant for several international organizations and agencies (UNDP, the IADB, USAID, the World Bank and the Organization of American States, OAS).