Supporting Sustainable Democracy Worldwide

"[C]itizens are increasingly and more clearly recognizing that freedom, equality, and human rights are universal common values shared by all humankind, and that democracy, a republic, and constitutionalism constitute the basic structural framework of modern governance. A "modernization" bereft of these universal values and this basic political framework is a disastrous process that deprives humans of their rights, corrodes human nature, and destroys human dignity."

These words from the opening paragraph of Charter 08, a manifesto signed by 350 intellectuals and democracy activists, reflect aspirations that are shared across cultures and religions, wealth and welfare gaps, war and peace. The essence of the universality of democracy is its adaptability to highly diverse contexts. By implication, those diverse contexts present democracy with a diversity of challenges. While the value of democracy is undisputed, the workings of democracy are often the source of dispute and tension.

The exact challenges facing democracy are highly context-specific within and between regions where IDEA is operating. Latin America is marked by free and fair elections, constitutional rule and stable support for democracy, but at the same time by lingering legacies of authoritarianism, elitism and inequality which create dangers of populism and weakening of checks and balances. Africa encompasses highly different stories, ranging from stable democracies to stable autocracies to coup d'états to fragile and violent situations in which democracy struggles to emerge and where diversity and poverty is often exploited for narrow political gain. The Middle East continues to be a region where timid reform efforts and an increasingly vivid civil society and "blogosphere" are met with efforts to further entrench authoritarian rule. Asia/Pacific defies analysis of regional trends, as it features massive democratic success stories such as India and Indonesia, heavy conflict and extremist belligerence in Afghanistan and Pakistan, and capitalist autocracy in China. Europe, long held to be a region of democratic consolidation, is witnessing social unrest and the strong showing of xenophobic political parties – raising serious questions about the region's ability to manage diversity in a democratic way.

At the heart of the democratic process are elections. International IDEA is proud to have played a significant part in strengthening global norms and capacities for design and management of electoral processes. A series of discredited elections in recent years demonstrate however that commitments undertaken by the vast majority of the world's states are not lived up to by many of the same states. It has become evident that international support in the form of technical knowledge and capacity-building do not suffice in the face of skilful political manipulation and rigging of elections. Furthermore, elections in contexts of armed conflict and fragility of institutions need to be addressed by the international community not as a technical event but as a political process with implications for peace and stability. In 2011 IDEA will launch initiatives in search of new approaches in this field.

Building sustainable democracy, peace and stability following armed conflict or transition from autocratic rule normally requires constitutional reform. Equal importance should be given to designing inclusive processes of constitution-building, building adequate content of constitutions, and ensuring their proper implementation. In 2011 IDEA will launch its handbook in constitution-building and take corresponding actions.

The best of constitutional frameworks and the most professional of election administrations cannot be sustained unless political actors – notably parties and parliaments – work to uphold democratic values of participation, representation, accountability and responsiveness. The reality today is too often that political parties are weak and unable to perform their essential functions in democracy, and that these critical functions of parties are ignored in international conflict management and development policy and action. The democratic process is also increasingly threatened by illicit funding and criminalisation of politics: a phenomenon which presents a challenge in all regions of the world. In 2011 IDEA will launch an initiative for protecting democratic politics and will seek to engage regional organisations in shaping joint strategies for combating the criminalisation of politics.

Critical to the legitimacy of democratic actors is their ability to create conditions for equitable social and economic development. In this too political parties and parliaments often fail and they are not helped by international development cooperation often ignoring the democratic accountability dimension. True democracy and profound development can only grow from within and below in society, and hence there are important synergies to be nurtured between democracy and development. In 2011 IDEA will take initiatives that seek to strengthen the role and capacity of democratic actors in promoting development.

Across these areas a continuing challenge to the quality and extent of democracy is the under-representation of women in politics. Through mainstreaming as well as gender-specific programming IDEA will promote gender equality in constitutional and electoral processes, political parties and parliaments, and in development processes. The management of diversity is also a key theme cutting across political processes and an issue in need of close attention not least in Europe. Finally, as evidenced throughout this Programme, conflict and security issues are key determinants of democracy's prospects across the world.

Results Based Management System

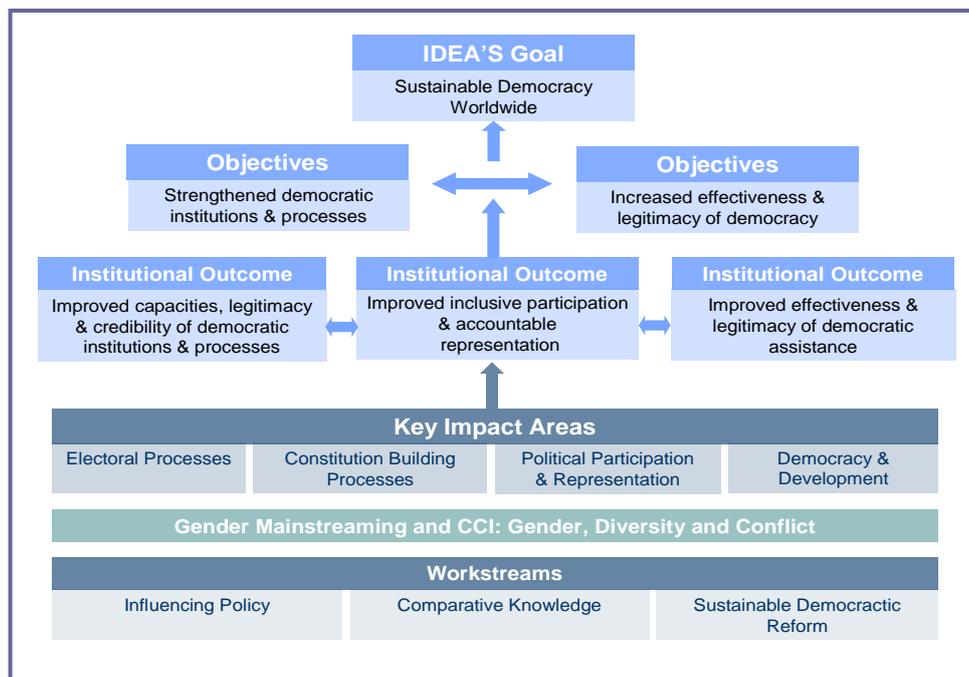

1. RBM Framework

International IDEA started the implementation of a Results Based Management System in 2010 aiming to improve management effectiveness and accountability. The system facilitates the definition of realistic outcomes, monitors progress toward the achievement of expected results; integrates lessons learned into management decisions and reports on performance.

The RBM supports a culture of collaboration and continuous improvement, aligning processes, resources and performance.

The framework for the implementation of the RBM system is designed in four dimensions:

- A hierarchy of an institution-wide goal, as well as objectives and outcomes;
- Four key impact areas (KIAs): electoral processes; political participation and representation; constitution building; and democracy and development;
- Gender mainstreaming as a programmatic focus, and cross-cutting issues (gender, conflict, and diversity) as analytical dimensions used throughout programmatic activities.
- The main streams of work marking International IDEA's approach: influencing policies and politics; developing comparative knowledge; and assisting in sustainable democratic reforms.

Institutional Goal, Objectives and Outcomes

International IDEA's goal is to support sustainable democracy worldwide. It seeks to achieve this goal by pursuing two main institutional objectives:

- Strengthened democratic institutions and processes; and
- Increased effectiveness and legitimacy of democracy.

International IDEA will contribute to the fulfilment of these objectives through three expected institutional outcomes of its work. They are:

- Improved capacities, legitimacy and credibility of democratic institutions and processes;
- Improved inclusive participation and accountable representation;
- Improved effectiveness and legitimacy of democracy assistance;

Key Impact Areas (KIAs)

The key areas on which International IDEA's institutional outcomes will impact are:

- Electoral Processes: International IDEA aims to improve the credibility of electoral processes through supporting effective management of electoral processes and political, legal and administrative reform.
- Political Participation and Representation: International IDEA supports the strengthening of democratic institutions and processes so that they reflect and respect the will of the people through inclusive participation and accountable representation;
- Constitution Building Processes: International IDEA aims to effectively support inclusive and participatory processes of constitution building and to facilitate the design and implementation of constitutional options for democratization and conflict resolution;
- Democracy and Development: International IDEA supports the strengthening of democratic institutions and processes so that they are enabled to more effectively generate equitable development.

Cross-Cutting Issues

Together with the comparative knowledge and policy-relevant experience related to the four KIAs, International IDEA utilizes specialized expertise and analysis on issues that cut across each KIA. The use of such expertise is crucial to understanding individual contexts of action for effective dialogue and reform. International IDEA's work focuses on three cross-cutting issues:

- Gender: Democracy is supposed to transform power relations between men and women in such a manner that gender equality is promoted in terms of inclusiveness, participation, representation and accountability of democratic processes to both women and men.
- Diversity: Democratic reforms will be effective if the capacity to manage human diversity is strengthened to promote inclusive participation and accountable representation of all sections of the population without regard to class, sex, age, gender, race, ethnic or religious background. Managing human diversity in democracy is a key strategy for conflict prevention and sustainable peace building.
- Conflict: This is a key analytical dimension of democracy building, not only in post-conflict situations but more broadly in any democratization process. Democratization may in itself be a conflict-prone process, particularly if it takes place in a polarized social environment deprived of functioning institutions and a minimum level of democratic culture, and if it is promoted hastily and focused, as is often the case, almost exclusively on elections.

Gender Mainstreaming

The objective of gender equality is indivisible from International IDEA's goal of sustainable democracy worldwide. Sustainable democracy ought to facilitate conditions and opportunities for women and men to participate fully in social, political and economic processes. Gender equality will be mainstreamed in all programmes, including by defining context-specific, gender-related outcomes and outputs.

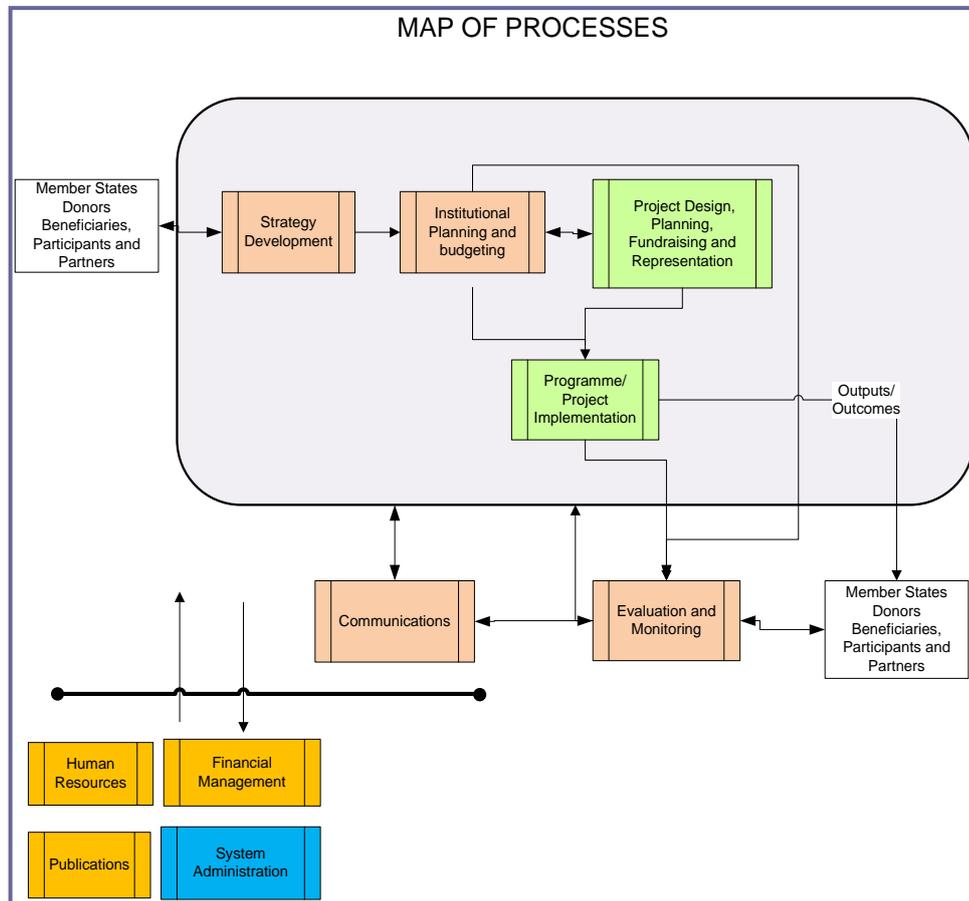

Work Streams

International IDEA has three mutually supportive work streams:

- Global comparative knowledge development: Collecting and providing non-prescriptive, comparative knowledge derived from practical experience on democracy building processes from diverse contexts around the world;
- Sustainable democratic reform: Assisting political actors in reforming democratic institutions and processes, and engaging in political processes when invited to do so;
- Influencing policies and politics: Influencing democracy building policies through the provision of comparative knowledge resources and assistance to political actors.

2. RBM Processes

In order to implement a culture of collaboration and continuous improvement International IDEA has defined three categories of organizational processes: strategic, actualization and support processes as shown on the next figure. These processes allow IDEA to determine and review all requirements applicable to its programmes/projects and to deliver adequate outcomes and outputs.

Processes categories consist of a number of specific processes that covers all IDEA's activities. Performance indicators have been defined for all processes and a summary of those can be found on annex no.1. The processes by category are:

Strategic Processes:

- Strategy Development Process
- Planning and Budgeting
- Evaluation and Monitoring
- Communications

Actualization processes

- Funding and Representation Process
- Project/Programme Implementation Process

Support Processes

- Human Resources Process
- Financial Management Process
- System Administration Process
- Publications and Online Knowledge Resources Process

External Relations and Governance Support

1. Programme Description

With its status as an intergovernmental organization as the starting point, International IDEA aims through its Secretariat to facilitate strategic relations and synergies between Member States, other governments, international cooperation agencies as well as international, regional and national organizations. Particular attention is given to the United Nations Organization as well as the Regional Organizations being the most important forums engaging in peace, security, social progress and human rights – which are all strengthened by democracy.

The specific objectives for the External Relations and Governance Support department are:

- To support the functioning of IDEA’s Council and Steering Committee, working closely with the Spanish Chairmanship to ensure political relevance throughout the year and prepare the next Australian Chairmanship
- To maintain and enrich the relationship of International IDEA with its Member States in order to strengthen synergies for supporting democracy worldwide.
- To increase the visibility of IDEA on the international scene through high level events and through deepening the relationship with key international, regional and national actors in the democracy field.
- To contribute to improving United Nations democracy-building policies and actions with respect to the three pillars of UN’s work: development, peace and security, and human rights
- To detect and coordinate IDEA’s identification of needs and responses to those needs by providing quality control of the design of projects and contribute to ensuring adequate financial resources to implement them.
- To strengthen relations with potential donors and international actors willing to support International IDEA initiatives in democracy building.

As a new initiative building on the networks established through the European Union Presidency Project 2008-2009, IDEA will establish an Inter-Regional Dialogue, as a neutral space for dialogue and joint action between regional organizations on democracy related issues. The Regional Organizations committed to participate are AU, ASEAN, EU, LAS, OAS, PIF and SAARC.

The External Relations and Governance Support team consists of 6 persons (2 females and 4 males) led by Karin Gardes-Koutny as Director, and with Massimo Tommasoli as Permanent Observer to the United Nations. In order to achieve the expected outcomes, Regional Directors, Heads of Offices and Senior Advisors have a key role to play in providing the necessary level of information for the team to perform as planned.

International IDEA expects the achievement of the following outcomes:

Outcomes	Outputs
Member states actively engage in supporting the democracy building strategy of International IDEA.	The Council and Steering Committee meet regularly. The communication plan with Member States is developed and executed. The membership of IDEA’s Council is successfully expanded to include an additional Member State.
Effective actions at the global, regional and country level are maximized through well design projects and adequate financial support.	Strong partnerships allow funding activities aligned to IDEA’s Key Impact Areas priorities. The Global Resource Mobilization Plan facilitates the identification and finalization of funding opportunities. The project design reflects beneficiaries’ needs

IDEA's actions are relevant in the international scene through close relationships with international and local stakeholders.	Representation and Advocacy Global Plan are developed and executed. IDEA has a visible and central role in at least 3 high-level events. The Inter-Regional Dialogue platform for engagement on democracy is in place with the support of key Regional Organizations, and has commenced a process towards shared action to combat illicit finance in and criminalization of politics.
Partners in the UN system endorse recommendations on institution building in the field of democracy assistance.	UN practitioners improve their understanding of the linkages between democracy and the three pillars of UN work. Effective spaces of inter-UN institutional dialogue are created on democracy building. Policy papers are produced on "Democracy and Human Rights" and "Democracy and Development".
Agreements are signed, cooperation is fostered and relationships are nurtured between IDEA and the permanent missions of its member states to the UN, other IGOs and NGOs based in North America as well as the UN.	Partners improve their understanding of democracy building and actively engage in partnership with International IDEA. Effective spaces of institutional dialogue are created in the democracy building community as well as CSOs, ISOs, regional organizations, the UN system, academia and governments of existing, new and restored democracies.

2. ERG Budget

The External Relations and Governance Support department is responsible for results at the institutional level but also for some programmatic activities. The budget allocated for institutional activities represents 0.6 million euros and the one for programmatic activities (the inter-regional dialogue as well as the UN and democracy building) is approximately 1 million euros. The programmatic outcomes for these projects are defined under Democracy and Development Key Impact Area. The ERG budget includes the cost related to IDEA's office in New York.

Programmatic Activities

The design of programmatic activities aims to support the achievement of the outcomes defined under each Key Impact Area. In 2010, International IDEA developed KIA Blue Prints that set specific objectives and focus areas for content development of the four Programmes. These are reflected in the following presentations of the Africa Programme, Latin America and the Caribbean Programme, Asia and The Pacific Programme and Global Programme. In addition to these programmes and budget allocations it is proposed to establish an overall programme budget line for “Emerging and Sustained Initiatives.” It builds on a previous arrangement called the Special Project Fund, which provided extra funds for new and unplanned activities in the course of the year. The establishment of the new budget line will also help address the record of under-spending over several years, as allocations can be made by the Secretary-General for projects that prove to execute well and hence are in need of additional funds. The criteria for making allocations from this fund will be as follows: i) The funds can be released only after a decision made by the Secretary-General; ii) The decision of the Secretary-General will be based on proposals submitted by a Director and based on RBM-approved project templates; iii) Only activities within IDEA’s defined RBM framework and Key Impact Areas are eligible for funding; iv) Funding can be provided for activities which were not foreseen at the time of the adoption of the Programme and Budget, or activities which have been successfully executed before the end of the year and which have a need for additional funding in order to sustain the results achieved; V) The Secretary-General will report on the allocations to the Council.

1. Africa Programme¹

1.1. Programme Description

The Africa Programme aims to achieve the following objectives:

- To strengthen democratic institutions and processes and increased effectiveness and legitimacy of democracy in Africa.
- To strengthen political parties, legislatures and electoral management bodies through political and electoral reform, promoting gender participation in political processes.
- To improve engagement of political actors in policy making and accountability in key sectors in order to increase the effectiveness of socio-economic development policies in Africa
- To improve citizen participation and accountable representation through the development of reform agendas using the State of Local Democracy assessment
- To enhance knowledge and actions to counter the increasing threat to democracy of the capture of political processes and political parties by non-state actors (including transnational crime) in East, West and Southern Africa
- To increase understanding and debate amongst key stakeholders on African Shared Values
- To enhance inclusiveness and participation in Constitution Building Processes in Africa

The Africa Programme comprises continent-wide projects (Electoral and Political Reform, Protecting Democratic Politics, Democracy and Development) as well as three sub-programmes (AU/IDEA Joint Activity Plan, Horn of Africa, and West Africa).

¹ The Africa Programme will as from 1 January 2011 no longer incorporate the Middle East. Continuation of ongoing IDEA activities in the Middle East will be managed from Headquarters and the future of IDEA programming in the Middle East will be determined through the process of developing the Strategy 2012-2017

The Programme expects to achieve the following outcomes by KIA:

Electoral Processes

- The ability of Election Management Bodies to perform their roles and responsibilities towards political parties has been strengthened, including the implementation of political party legislation;
- Post-electoral audits and political reform efforts have been supported and have led to the adoption of improved legislation or other measures, with particular emphasis on strengthening gender equality in electoral processes;
- A network of IDEA Member States Electoral Management Bodies in Africa has been established as a peer mechanism to support other EMBs;

Political Participation and Representation Processes

- Democracy assessment at the local level has been commenced in Ghana with the purpose of developing democratic reform agendas, and, in the process, in-country capacity for the conduct of democracy assessments has been strengthened;
- Political parties have been engaged in dialogue on their engagement in electoral processes and with EMBs;
- Political parties have addressed the need to improve policies for socio-economic development and have also discussed policy recommendations on sustaining clean politics, fighting illicit finance, and mitigating the possibilities of non-state armed actors capturing political processes and political parties at local, sub-national and national levels;
- The awareness level about the dangers to democracy of non-state armed actors capturing political processes and political parties has been raised in political parties, sub-regional and regional bodies; and also in the legislative institutions.

Constitution Building Processes

- Capacities of the African Union and its member states have been strengthened on principles and practices of constitutionalism in Africa, including through the sharing of best practices and knowledge of democratic culture;
- Constitution Building Processes in Africa have adopted more inclusive and participatory approaches based on the AU concept of Shared Values;
- IDEA has responded in a timely manner to requests for input into constitution-building processes.

Democracy and Development

- Political actors have addressed the need to adopt stronger accountability mechanisms in key sectors in order to increase the effectiveness of socio-economic development policies;
- The toolkit piloted in Mozambique for the self-assessment of democratic accountability in service delivery has been extended to other parts of Southern Africa.

International IDEA seeks to create synergies and partnerships with regional and local democracy actors. In particular, the Programme works with:

- African Union Commission (AUC) and in particular its Political Affairs Department
- Democratic and Electoral Assistance Unit (DEAU) of the African Union Commission
- Election Management Bodies in Africa
- UN Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA)
- The Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS)
- Southern Africa Development Community (SADC)
- The United Nations Development Programme (UNDP)

Africa continues making great strides towards establishing democratic practices across the continent, with more and more countries initiating or repeating multi-party elections in 2011. Despite these gains, challenges to democracy remain weak political institutions and parties, under-representation of women in political life, contentious and violent elections and limited media freedom. In the complex political and economic African context, the desired outcomes are based on the following assumptions: that African governments and political leaders seek to live up to commitments undertaken in the field of democracy, elections and governance; that IDEA has the capacity to adequately respond to shifting circumstances and a variety of requests; and that IDEA is able to further develop and strengthen partnerships in the region. At the same time, the programme has identified the following main risks towards achieving the outcomes: lack of commitment or consistency of governments and political leaders; renewed conflict in Sudan and the Horn of Africa; disinterest of or obstruction by political actors to democratic dialogue and reform efforts. During the implementation of the Programme, IDEA will manage the risks and assumptions in order to respond adequately to any changes that may occur.

The Africa programme team consists of 20 people (6 females and 14 males), led by Mustaq Moorad, Regional Director for Africa; from the regional office based in Regional Office (Pretoria, South Africa). The Africa Programme will be strengthened by 7 staff members in 2011.

In addition, a sub-regional office exists in Accra, Ghana (Theo Dowetin is the Programme Manager for West Africa); a project office in Khartoum, Sudan (Manal Ali Basheir is the Project Manager); and an Observer Office is being established at the African Union in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia (Muna Abdalla is the Head of the Office).

1.4. Horn of Africa

The Horn of Africa sub-programme aims to strengthen political participation and representation as a vehicle for democracy and peace building. The region is a high conflict zone and this has negatively affected the development of democracy. A major risk to the sub-programme is renewed conflict between Eritrea and Ethiopia as well as the Sudan referendum, whose results may derail efforts but which will, at the same time, underline the need for innovative approaches which incorporate democracy building elements into peace and security efforts.

The specific objective is:

1.6. 2011 Africa Programme Budget

International IDEA will allocate approximately € 3.87 million in order to accomplish the objectives and outcomes of the 2011 Africa Programme.

2. Latin America and the Caribbean Programme

2.1. Programme Description

The Latin American and the Caribbean Programme (LAC) aims to achieve the following objectives:

- Electoral reform processes are facilitated and conditions for free and fair elections are supported, through strengthened institutional capacities of EMBs and frameworks that ensure the equitable access of political parties and candidates to financing and the media;
- Institutionalized, inclusive, participatory and accountable political parties are strengthened in the region;
- To enhance knowledge and actions to counter the increasing threat to democracy of the capture of political processes and political parties by non-state actors (including transnational crime)
- Dialogue for inclusive and participatory processes of constitution building is supported to contribute to the adoption of constitutions which are nationally owned by citizens, inclusive, sustainable and sensitive to the dimensions of gender and conflict prevention;

- The incorporation of broader women's representation and the inclusion of gender-oriented themes in national and regional political agendas to improve gender equality in politics;
- The assessment of emerging opportunities to assist electoral and political reforms and possible entry points in the region for action on the four Key Impact Areas, with particular reference to the political evolution of countries like Haiti, Honduras and Cuba, and sub-regions like the Caribbean.

The LAC Programme focus its attention on three sub-regions: Central America and the Caribbean, the Andean Region and the Southern Cone and has national-level activities in Costa Rica, Dominican Republic, Mexico, Peru, Ecuador, Bolivia, Colombia, Chile and Argentina. At the regional level, IDEA supports knowledge sharing among democratic actors.

The Programme expects to achieve the following outcomes by KIA:

Electoral Processes

- Improved capacities of EMBs, legislatures, political parties and CSOs to support political dialogue for electoral reform processes.
- Electoral reform proposals are put on the agenda and debated by key stakeholders.
- Gender friendly electoral reforms are developed by parliaments and political parties.
- Improved capacities of political parties to implement the new requirements of the electoral legislation in particular those related to funding.

Political Participation and Representation Processes

- Improved organizational and technical capacities of political parties.
- Improved capacity of civil society and media to be able to verify and monitor political parties funding.
- The awareness level has been raised and policy recommendations discussed in political parties, sub-regional and regional bodies; and also in the legislative institutions about the dangers to democracy of non-state armed actors capturing political processes and political parties at local, sub-national and national levels.
- Enhanced access by women to participation and representation in politics and decision making.
- Direct democracy processes are incorporated in the democratic practices of the region.
- Increased equity and inclusion of women in political institutions.
- Improved performance and gender perspective of women in Congress.

Constitution Building Process

- Improved legal capacity to implement new constitution (Ecuador).

Democracy and Development

- Options for pro-poor political reforms are debated by key stakeholders
- Improved capacities of key stakeholders, especially political leaders, to understand and build consensus on the developmental impact of political systems
- Cooperation agencies utilize political analysis and effectively engage with political actors for development planning and implementation.

International IDEA believes in creating synergies and partnerships with regional and local democracy actors. In particular, the Programme works with:

- Organization of American States (OAS).
- United Nations Development Programme, including the Proyecto de Análisis Político y Escenarios Probables (PAPEP).
- Inter-American Development Bank (IDB).
- Instituto de Investigaciones Jurídicas de la Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México (IIJ UNAM), Instituto Federal Electoral (IFE).
- International Political Science Association (IPSA).
- Fundación para la Paz y la Democracia (FUMPADEM)
- FUNGLODE, Presidencia de la República Dominicana, CIEPLAN, Inter American Dialogue
- The United Nations Development Fund for Women (UNIFEM).
- Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU).
- Netherlands Institute for Multi-Party Democracy (NIMD)
- The Carter Center
- Red de estudios para la calidad de la Democracia
- Comisión Económica para América Latina y el Caribe (CEPAL)
- The United Nations Development Programme (UNPD)

In a complex political and economical environment the desired outcomes are defined based on three main assumptions; that there is political support for key democratic reforms, IDEA is capable of building strong partnerships in the region, and that there is additional funding available from interested Member States for supporting the consolidation and gradual expansion of the programme to other sub-regions on the continent. The Programme has identified the main risks towards achieving the outcomes: high volatility and political instability in some countries, a lack of interest from political parties and insufficient financial resources. During the implementation of the Programme IDEA will manage the risks and assumptions in order to respond adequately to any changes that may occur.

The LAC Programme team consists of 21 people (14 females and 7 males), led by Daniel Zovatto from the regional office based in Costa Rica. Kristen Sample is the Head of Office for the Andean Region while Virginia Beramendi and Rafael Roncagliolo lead the Bolivia and Peru office, respectively. Programmes in Colombia and Ecuador are implemented in partnership with UNDP and NIMD, respectively.

3. Asia and the Pacific Programme

3.1. Programme Description

The process of design and testing the Asia and The Pacific Programme in consultation with member states, observer state and other stakeholders has resulted in the definition of the following general objectives.

- To contribute to supporting sustainable democratic change in Asia and the Pacific;
- To contribute to creating capacities by raising awareness and providing comparative knowledge and analysis on Western, Asian and Southern experience.
- To facilitate networks and partnerships which enable the expertise and experience from the region to inform sustainable democratic change elsewhere in the world.

In this context, the Programme has prioritized the following focus areas: higher level support to processes of political reform and capacity building for participatory governance; citizen assessment of democracy; and working with and through regional organizations to support locally owned and sustainable democratic change. These areas correspond to IDEA's outcomes with relation to the electoral processes, political participation and representation processes and constitution building processes Key Impact Areas.

The Programme expects to achieve the following outcomes by KIA:

Electoral Processes.

- Improved capacities of EMBs built in selected countries leads to better quality of electoral processes
- Reform proposals are taken up by relevant stakeholders
- Implementation of IDEA's work in influencing policies/politics relating to electoral processes and frameworks

Political Participation and Representation Processes

- Civil society organizations, government and other regional stakeholders engage in dialogue and develop reform agendas based on regional experience using Democracy Assessments
- To enhance knowledge and actions to counter the increasing threat to democracy of the capture of political processes and political parties by non-state actors (including transnational crime)

Constitution Building Process

- A space for dialogue created on inclusive constitution building

An important element of the Programme in 2011 will be to design projects that respond to the requests from the Region and identify counterparts interested in providing financial support to fulfil those needs. In this respect, supporting initiatives within South Asia towards the adoption of a SAARC Democracy Charter will play a central role. The Programme would also continue to develop relationships with the ASEAN Secretariat and the Pacific Islands Forum. It is planned to establish a regional office for the short to medium term in Canberra, Australia. In addition, the Programme expects to keep a close relationship with political actors from across the region and, importantly, continues to support Nepal's constitution building process.

The strengthening of alliances with key international and local actors is fundamental in order to facilitate the support of democracy in Asia and The Pacific. The Programme will seek to continue working with the following partners, and will also seek further partners in particular in Thailand and the Maldives:

- The University of the Philippines National College of Public Administration and Governance (UP-NCPAG).
- Philippine Council for Islam and Democracy (PCID).
- Political Development Council of Thailand (PDC).
- The Election Commission of Thailand and the Asian Network for Free Elections (ANFREL).
- South Asia Centre for Policy Studies (SACEPS).
- Nepal Law Society (NLS).
- The Constituent Assembly of Nepal and its interest caucuses.
- The Election Commission of Nepal.
- Women in Good Governance in Nepal.
- Nepal Constitutional Foundation (NCF).
- The Election Commission of Bhutan.
- The Non-Aligned Movement Centre for South-South Technical Cooperation (NAM-CSSTC).
- Bali Democracy Forum.
- The Ministry of Home Affairs (Kemdagri) of Indonesia.
- Centre for Electoral Reform (CETRO) in Indonesia.
- The Election Oversight Body (Bawaslu) of Indonesia.
- The Government of Mongolia.
- The Election Commission of Mongolia.
- International Foundation for Electoral Systems (IFES).
- United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

The achievement of the outcomes by the Programme is based on three main assumptions: IDEA is capable of offering value-added support to political local actors; partners have the capacity to undertake democracy assessments; and there are counterparts interested in providing financial resources to implement the required activities. Other important considerations assume the active commitment of Mongolian actors to participatory governance and the space for input to the process of reform of the political and electoral legislation in Indonesia.

In Nepal the main assumptions refer to the promulgation of the constitution within a year, the capacity of the constitution to incorporate the agenda on inclusion and the continuing receptiveness of the process to IDEA support.

The Asia and The Pacific Programme also faces risks in accomplishing the specified results such as the limitation of counterparts in raising funds for democracy assessments, shifts in reform needs, and willingness of governments in the region to draw on IDEA as a democracy building resource. Accordingly, the work plan may require alteration mid-way to respond to changing environments, circumstances or opportunities.

In Nepal the main risks are the stalling of the negotiations regarding the constitution for a further substantial period of time, and the risk that agreement and promulgation triggers violent reactions. The possible negative attitude by the media to dialogues organized outside of the country and the interpretation as inference in internal political matters by some internal and external players would need to be managed by the Programme.

The Asia and Pacific Programme team consists of 12 people (6 females and 6 males) led by Andrew Ellis on a special assignment basis since 2009. Leena Rikkilä, Senior Programme Manager oversees the Nepal's project in which 10 people are attached. It is expected to officially accredit an office for the short to medium term in Australia before the end of 2011, which will lead to the recruitment of a permanent Regional Director and additional staff.

3.2. Asia and the Pacific - Regional Scope

Through support for the development of regional expertise and knowledge sharing in the field of citizen assessment of democracy, the provision of higher level support to the reform of political and institutional frameworks, and support to the discussion of democracy and democracy support at regional level, the Programme will pursue in 2011 the following specific objectives:

- To build regional capacities for democracy assessment and identify opportunities of reform in at least two countries, and to support the establishment of a regional hub for democracy assessment.

4.1. Programme Description

The Global Programme aims to achieve the following objectives:

- To improve the capacities of global and regional actors and democracy building practitioners in electoral processes, political participation and representation, constitution building processes, and democracy and development;

The Global Programme focuses its attention on developing knowledge resources in each Key Impact Area that are relevant for policy development and reform efforts by global, regional and national actors. The Programme also emphasizes the elaboration of methodologies and tools to integrate cross-cutting issues in all programmatic activities.

The Programme expects to achieve the following outcomes by KIA:

Electoral Processes

- Enhanced capacities of election management bodies (EMBs) and election practitioners to contribute to credible, legitimate and democratic electoral processes;
- Increased adoption by key policy makers of the electoral cycle approach, including in the area of electoral assistance effectiveness and reform; and
- Enhanced respect for electoral rights and equitable citizen participation in democratic processes.

Political Participation and Representation Processes

- Enhanced capacities of practitioners, policy makers and political party actors to support effective quality political party assistance;
- Enhanced capacities of political parties and other political actors (e.g. political movements) in performing inclusive political participation and accountable representation for effective democratic governance;
- Improved political cycle of accountability through proposals for reform and change put on the agenda by relevant stakeholders, particularly on making national politics work for development; empowering women in political processes; influencing how citizens can hold their own political leaders accountable; influencing how international development and democracy assistance can help strengthen domestic democratic accountability;

- United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).
- United Nations Department for Political Affairs.
- World Bank Institute.

The Global Programme sets its priorities in a worldwide context and as a consequence the management of assumptions and risks is particularly complex.

Regarding Electoral Processes the main assumption for achieving the results refers to IDEA's capacity to maintain the high quality of its existing knowledge resources as well as to introduce new tools that facilitate assistance to regions and countries. The main risks identified are the limited engagement of key stakeholders in reform efforts and the volatility of the political context, particularly in conflict-prone situations.

The achievement of outcomes related to Political Participation and Representation Processes is based on the assumption that all stakeholders and partners involved have the required interest, engagement and commitment. Linked to this, the two main risks refer to the insufficient interest and engagement of practitioners, policy makers and political party assistance actors in dialogue and the limited commitment of political parties in these processes.

The main assumptions in providing support to Constitution Building Processes are a strong interest among States to engage with International IDEA on this topic, and a positive Member States' response to International IDEA taking on a more focused policy influencing role. The main risk in countries covered by direct assistance is the emergence of a political crisis. In such a situation, IDEA would be required to adjust or even delay its support.

The most recent area of IDEA's impact, Democracy and Development, based its global contribution on the assumptions that their activities are not blocked by political leadership or crisis, and that the self-assessment tool is not considered too politically sensitive to pilot. Principal risks to the achievement of the outcomes are the insufficient incentives for donors and development actors to change their practice in order to engage more with democratic accountability institutions.

The outcomes expected in reducing the inequalities between men and women in democracy are based on the assumption that gender is mainstreamed in all programmatic and institutional activities in IDEA, and the engagement and commitment from political actors to implement change.

The Global Programmes team, based in Stockholm, Sweden comprised of 34 staff members (17 females and 17 males), and is led by Andrew Bradley. The team has six Managers: Anna Lekvall-Zaar, Democracy and Development; Bjarte Torå, Political Parties; Keboitse Machangana, State of Democracy; Rumbidzai Kandawasvika-Nhundu, Democracy and Gender; Rushdi Nackerdien, Electoral Processes (acting) and Winluck Wahiu, Constitution Building Processes. Additionally for the cross-cutting issues, Santiago Villaveces, is Senior Advisor for Conflict and Security, and the Senior Advisor for Democracy and Diversity is currently under recruitment. Due to the nature of Global Programmes, the team interacts with all regions.

4.2. Electoral Processes

In 2011, The Global Programme will support electoral processes through the delivery of global comparative knowledge resources and assistance in policy development and electoral reform. Recent initiatives regarding electoral-related violence and participatory democracy will be strengthened.

Specific objectives:

- Strengthen capacities of election officials, electoral practitioners and EU and domestic observers through specialized training tools, effective networks and international fora.

4.2.1. Protecting and Promoting the Integrity of the Electoral Process

A number of troubled electoral processes and their fall-out in recent years have cast a shadow on the credibility of democracy, including the commitment of the international community to upholding democratic principles. To this end, the nature and practice of electoral assistance are being questioned. While some well-managed elections lead to a peaceful transition of power, other elections can be fraudulent, violent, manipulated, or a combination thereof. In some cases national stakeholders fail to live up to commitments they have undertaken. Moreover, the international community often lacks a consistent and long-term approach in support of elections, or does not succeed in shaping united and timely responses to potentially challenging elections. International actors however frequently fail to take accountability for their own shortcomings in this respect.

As a leading actor in electoral knowledge and assistance International IDEA will launch an initiative to protect and promote the integrity of the electoral process, which is fundamental for sustainable democracy. This will be achieved by enhancing the consistency, quality and sustainability of electoral processes and international support to these, through work in three key areas: the establishment of a Global Commission which will develop new recommendations for comprehensive and sustainable international support to electoral processes; supporting the institutional and professional development of key actors and stakeholders of the electoral process and its outcomes; and strengthening knowledge-sharing through peer networks of election officials. The initiative is launched in partnership with the Kofi Annan Foundation.

Outcomes	Outputs

4.4. Constitution Building Processes

The Global Programme, aware that constitution building processes have an increasingly important role in the design of institutions during democratic reforms and in post conflict transitions, seeks to strengthen such processes. In 2011 it will focus its attention on developing comparative knowledge, implementing specialized training tools, and promoting South-South Dialogue. The Global Programme will engage with regional programmes in order to reinforce activities in countries where IDEA has presence, in particular Nepal and Ecuador. 5. Gender Mainstreaming and Gender Policy

The objective of achieving gender equality is indivisible from the International IDEA goal of sustainable democracy worldwide, hence International IDEA's commitment to making gender equality a reality.

To crystallize this commitment International IDEA has defined a Gender Policy that sets the frame for the implementation of actions. The Institute addresses gender through two complementary and critical approaches; gender mainstreaming and women's empowerment.

Gender mainstreaming is a strategy for enhancing gender responsive management practices and programming which benefits both women and men through International IDEA's work.

Women's empowerment is a strategy of targeted actions aimed at empowering women and righting gender inequalities in the social, political and economic spheres. Focus on women's political empowerment and mobilization will be undertaken alongside efforts to mainstream gender within the institutional mechanisms and work on democracy.

In this context International IDEA has defined specific objectives:

- To ensure that the institutional strategy, policies, management systems, practices and programmes are gender sensitive and responsive;
- To promote the adoption of policies and practices that address the equal distribution of power and influence between men and women in shaping sustainable democratic processes, institutions and outcomes;
- To ensure that gender equality objectives and indicators are reflected in staff objectives and results, performance assessments, management and administration systems.

The main priorities for 2011 are the strengthening of explicit gender objectives, indicators and strategies in all key impact areas, and the implementation of work methodologies that facilitates gender equality. Regarding internal management systems, International IDEA will continue implementing its work plan.

In addressing gender, International IDEA faces some challenges: the perception that gender equality goals are "self implementing" without the requirement of specific support; inadequate knowledge on the nature of gender disparities that makes it difficult to define improvement actions; and the level of consistency and political willingness-in practice for achievement gender equality.

International IDEA expects to achieve the following outcomes and outputs.

Outcomes	Outputs
Improved capacities of IDEA's staff to address gender inequalities.	IDEA's staff trained on the nature of gender inequalities. IDEA's staff adopts visible gender values, attitudes and practices.
Improved integration of gender aspects in International IDEA's work on strengthening democratic institutions and processes.	Programmatic activities have specific gender objectives and indicators. Methodologies to overcome gender inequalities are ready to use for IDEA's staff.

6. Secretary-General's Office

6.1. Strategy Development

The current International IDEA Strategy closes its cycle in 2011 therefore a new process for the development of the strategy started early this year and it is expected to result in a new strategy for 2012-2017. As a result of the RBM system, the strategy development process follows specific procedures that will contribute to the quality and consistency of the new strategy.

In the first semester of 2011 the process will include a review of the base line analysis, stakeholder consultations and the elaboration of a draft to be presented to Member States.

6.2. Communications and Knowledge Management

In responding to rapid technological changes and recognizing the need to formally manage its internal knowledge, International IDEA will broaden its approach to Communications by introducing more formalized Knowledge Management processes.

The objective of communications and knowledge management is two-fold: communicate IDEA's work, and take advantage of its intellectual assets through knowledge management.

The management of knowledge in a systematic way will allow the institute not only to streamline its own internal operations and information flows, but more coherently articulate its work and achievements to the wide range of target audiences outside the institute, whether they are partners, practitioners, investors, the media and others.

A key element for the success of the system is the recruitment of the Head of Strategic Planning and RBM who will be responsible for the administration of the system.

6.4. Evaluation

In 2011 International IDEA will implement a renewed evaluation process to ensure the conformity and effectiveness of its work. The process consists of four sub-processes: strategy review; institutional planning, programme/project evaluation and management review.

The evaluation results will aim at improvement the Institute performance and the adherence of rules and regulations. The Secretary-General is responsible for the process and adequate resources are being allocated to execute it.

Financial audits will remain under the responsibility of the Director of Corporate Services.

The budget for 2011 is allocation on the basis of principles defined as part of the new RBM system, in order to ensure that financial resources support the achievement of the expected outcomes and outputs. There are five categories of principles:

- Strategic and IGO Identity. These principles stipulate that the budget allocation should be in accordance with the Statutes and the Regulations endorsed by the Council and should adhere to IDEA's Mandate, Institutional Strategy and Gender Policy. The budget should also support the objectives of each Key Impact Area and take into account the feedback received from IDEA's evaluation process.
- Accountability Principles. IDEA should have a clear and transparent decision making process where priorities are defined and choices are made, based either on political priorities or on the level of impact.. Budget allocation should also consider teams' proven capacity based on RBM performance and evaluations.
- Innovation Principles. These principles stipulate that International IDEA should allocate resources to be able to launch new approaches, methodologies and initiatives in order to maintain its leading position in democracy assistance.
- Equity Principle. Allocation of unrestricted funding should reflect the level of IDEA's comparative strength in each KIA, taking advantage of maturity in certain areas of success, IDEA's presence in certain regions and the promotion of new initiatives. In addition, allocation of Unrestricted Funding should consider the capacity within each KIA to attract complementary resources in order to achieve the expected results at global, regional and country level.
- Human Capital Development Principle. These principles indicate that budget allocation should facilitate the strengthening of IDEA's competence, professional development and knowledge transfer and building of a collaborative working environment within IDEA.
